Integration Provides Flexibility for Diverse Workforce

Challenge History

Levi's Building Solutions was searching for a more modern solution that could work smoothly with its current ERP and offer flexibility with items such as payroll taxes. Previously, the company ERP faced limitations, being unable to create unique and customized setups in the system. The ERP also required a significant amount of time and workforce. As a result, the company wanted a solution that moved a large portion of that labor from in-house to a third-party provider.

“Workforce Go has really given us the opportunity to transform our organization, in that it allows us to have a lot more flexible vacation options. In our previous solution, we would not have had the ability to add some more unique set ups like we’ve been able to do with Workforce Go.”

Additionally, labor shortages and retaining skilled, quality workers have been challenges over the last few years. With a labor force that is quite spread out (some workers on the floor, some in the office, and some on the road), the company wanted to ensure that all employees could rely on being paid correctly no matter where they were. Implementing Workforce Go increased the reliability of payroll processing, helping the company keep its skilled employees by paying them correctly and timely.

Why Levi's Building Components Chose Workforce Go

Levi's Building Components wanted a more modern solution that also offered more flexibility; based on multiple recommendations from other users, they turned to Workforce Go. Workforce Go offered the right balance of usability and cost and integrated smoothly with the company's existing ERP. Its multiple clock-in and clock-out options also enable employees to manage their time no matter where they are. The company can now trust that the payroll process will be simple and reliable while catering to the needs of its complex labor force.

“Our finance team really sees the value of Workforce Go in a variety of different ways, perhaps the biggest is just the simplicity of it.”

“We’ve gone through several software implementations and we felt like this was one of the simplest ones we’ve went through with the minimal amount of pain.”
